For many thinkers, teachers and creators around the world, colonialism and post-colonialism have been useful lenses to better understand history and to enact lasting justice. Come learn more about this—and ask important questions—at Cherokee Park’s panel discussion and Sunday service.

PANEL DISCUSSION

Friday, May 3

Dinner created by chefs Okogyeamon Perkins and Maria McNamara begins at 6:00 p.m.
Moderated discussion begins at 6:45 p.m. (Free will donation)

Panel members Jim Bear, Roxanne Gould, Leon Rodrigues, and Chris Smith will share their understanding of the legacy of colonialism on indigenous communities around the globe.

Whether you are new to the concerns of colonialism or an advanced thinker, join us and bring your questions about the impact of colonialism for our panel members to address

SERMON by Roxanne Gould

Sunday, May 5

Sunday service at Cherokee Park United starts at 10:15 a.m.

Professor Gould’s work both here and in many communities abroad reflects her commitment to social justice and decolonization that will bring about healing in indigenous communities.

Please join us for our weekly fellowship hour following the service.
